Mehr Tacos of Agave & RyePhoto: Hailey BollingerCold again can inspire many of us to wrap up in four blankets, only to let our hands out in the cold to grab a bowl of soup or stew. But there are actually a lot of great options when it comes to food to help you warm up. I personally can't get enough of spicy, fragrant tacos in winter and I know I'm not alone. The burgeoning artisan tacos and cocktails restaurant concept has brought more than the typical chicken, steak or bean fillings to the table - which admittedly, already tasty just as they are. But the best part of a taco festival is that you don't just have to pick the novel or just the gold standards. Pair one or two of these wild taco combinations with your favorite carnitas on a tortilla and just experience how cozy a taco can be. The Sensei Taco of Agave & Rye As far as meat that miles must travel to get to your taco, Agave & Rye might beat all others with their Sensei taco, which features soy and ginger kangaroo tenderloin. Along with orange rum glaze and spicy peanut chip oil, this is just one of the interesting menu options available. Skip a traditional lobster roll and rather feast on the Agave & Rye Crown Jewel lobster taco, topped with salted mushrooms and mac-and-cheese. Agave & Rye's epic tacos come with a crunchy, hard shell inside of a soft shell, which really levels the experience: the bright snap of the taco without the explosion of fillings makes it easier to eat than average. 635 Madison Ave., Covington, agaveandrye.com.The Huitlacoche Taco of Bakersfield OTRBakersfield has been dishwashing tacos made with carefully balanced flavor profiles for a while, keeping the residents of and visitors to Over-the-Rhine happy at their busy Vine Street eatery. If you haven't their huitlacoche taco tried, it's time you stopped for something both vegetarian vegetarian completely unique. From the wheat grape that forms the central filling of the taco (huitlacoche is a kind of mushroom-like fungus growing on maize) to the hot poblano, added corn, cotija cheese and the depth surrendered by the cilantro, the sum of these taco's flavors is more than its parts, all served in a handmade tortilla. 1213 Vine St., Over-the-Rhine, bakerfieldtacos.com.Nada's caramelized cauliflower tacoPhoto: Hailey BollingerThe caramelized cauliflower Taco from NadaTacos could be a surprisingly fertile playground for non-meat-eaters, Having a variety of vegetables and legumes to combine While the caramelized cauliflower taco at Nada is not vegan due to a juicy dollop of garlic-whipped goat cheese, combining scallion for freshness, fresno pepper for flavor and marcona almond for crunch is unbeatably delicious. Nada does a good job at combining textures that set off your taste buds just as much as the spices and cheese. 600 Walnut St., Downtown, eatdrinknada.com.The Mantis Taco of Condado TacosCondado makes it easy to create your own unique dish with their build-your-own taco concept (and order shapes), all of which are served in a brightly-painted interior along with tasty signature margaritas. While there's a combination to match every flavor preference, among their proposed tacos is the Mantis. The Mantis pairs smoky jackfruit with cheese, onions, mango habaero salsa and a taco shell combo called the Sweet Lucy - a hard corn shell inside of a soft flour shell for maximum sturdiness, with queso and guacamole pre-added like some sort of wonderful taco glue. 195 E. Freedom Way, Downtown; 3329 Vandercar Way, Oakley, condadotacos.com.Drunken Tacos' bulgogi tacoPhoto: Hailey BollingerThe Bulgogi Taco of Drunk TacosAt DrunkEn Tacos, the bulgogi (aka Korean-style marinated beef) is ultra-scented and cuts thin enough to fit inside a taco and not the whole thing apart The restaurant put all sorts of East Asian flavors to work on their fusion-food menu, proving that a wide range of kitchens taste great in a tortilla. Be warned: The beef can have a delicate sweetness to it, but it also packs severe spicy heat. You'll forget about winter's chill after some of these, and there are many more famous Latin flavors on the menu to fill and perhaps even combine if you eat. 200 W. McMillan St., Clifton Heights, facebook.com/ucdrunkentacos.The Taconey of Jefferson SocialThis taco has peak-Cincinnati energy and is served just steps away from Great American Ball Park. Jefferson Social's Taconey combines many flavors while maintaining the integrity of both a taco and a Cincinnati chili cheese coney. Batting for the taco team is a flour tortilla, pico de gallo, grilled tomato sauce and cream, while the coney aspect is fulfilled with short rib seasoned with Cincinnati-style chili flavors, plus a hot dog and mustard. Together it's a meaty, mouthful what tend to forget soon. 101 E. Freedom Way, Downtown, jeffersonsocial.com.Mazunte Centro's mushroom and beet taco (far left)Picture: Hailey BollingerThe Mushroom and Beet Taco of Mazunte CentroYou will be hard-pressed to find a more nutrient-dense taco than this one, though other Mazunte flavors — including the roasted zucchini and roasted stuffed pepper tacos — come close. The combination of fried greens, roasted beets (full of color and sweetness), mushrooms and salsa, the Hongos y Betabeles taco will fill you. Ricotta cheese adds a tasty wealth to the plate. 611 Main St., Downtown, centro.mazuntetacos.com.The Fried Chicken Taco of Django Western TacoMy first love at Django are certainly their tochos, a preposterous pile of tater tots crab with queso, carnitas and crema, but there are certainly other excellent options on the menu. The fried chicken taco combines fried chicken, pimento cheese and chipotle honey and will take your tastebuds south of the Mason-Dixon line. Sure, fried chicken isn't a staple of the traditional taco-fill scene, but that will make you crave a large glass of sweet tea more than an icy margin. 4172 Hamilton Ave., Northside, djangonorthside.com.
